Biographical history

What follows is a short outline of the main facts of Camille Huysman's life. For further reading please consult the source references at the end.

Jean Joseph Camille Hansen was born on 26 May 1871 in Bilzen. His father refused to acknowledge him. His mother, Catharina Trien Hansen, married Auguste Huysmans in 1881. As a result, Camille took his stepfather's name. Camille Huysmans was educated at the municipal primary school in Bilzen, where he was the only pupil in his class at one point – a situation not uncommon in Belgium in this period due to the country's contentious education policies. He went to secondary school in Tongeren, after which he studied Germanic languages (1887-1891) at the Ecole Normale des Humanités in Liège. From 1893 until 1897, he worked as a teacher in Ypres and subsequently in the Brussels municipality of Ixelles. In 1897, he married Martha Espagne in Brussels. They had three children: Marthe, Paul and Sara. After Martha died in 1955, he remarried two years later, with Ida Smissen.

In 1896, Huysmans joined the Workers' Party of Belgium (Belgische Werkliedenpartij, BWP). He was refused tenure as a teacher because of his affiliation with the socialist movement, which led to a career change, in journalism. In 1908, he was elected to the Brussels city council, marking the start of a long career in politics. A few years later, in 1910, he was elected to the Belgian Chamber of Representatives. In 1921, he moved from Brussels to Antwerp, where he lived for the rest of his life. Here too, he was a member of the city council. He successively held the positions of Alderman for Education (1921-1925) and Alderman for City Property (1932), after which he was elected city mayor. He was in office from 1933 until 1947, albeit with an interruption during World War II, when he fled to London. Huysmans was a member of the Chamber of Representatives without interruption until 1965, making him one of the longest serving MPs in Belgian history. He served as president of the Chamber twice (1936-1939; 1954-1958). He was named Minister of Education twice (1925-1927; 1947-1949). In 1946-1947, he served as Prime Minister of Belgium.

In the 1965 parliamentary elections, the Belgian Socialist Party (Belgische Socialistische Partij, BSP) decided that he was too old to stand for re-election. Huysmans countered, founding his own Flemish Socialist Movement (Socialistische Beweging Vlaanderen). Despite the many preferential votes, he was not re-elected as MP.

Huysmans played an important role in Belgian politics as well as on the international political scene. From 1905 until 1922, he served as secretary of the International Socialist Bureau. In this capacity, he also took the initiative to organise the Stockholm peace conference, gathering socialists from all the countries at war and neutral countries, in an attempt to end World War I. Unfortunately, his attempt failed. Later, Huysmans continued to play an active role in the international socialist movement. From 1940 until 1945, he was re-elected as secretary and president of the Labour and Socialist International. After the re-establishment of the Socialist International in 1951, he actively contributed to its activities. Huysmans died in Antwerp on 25 February 1968.

Archival history

Huysmans was a passionate collector. He never threw anything away, not even the smallest scrap of paper. His archive grew steadily as a result of his extensive and diverse activities. Unfortunately, two world wars prevented his archive from being immaculately preserved. The Germans plundered it on two occasions, mainly targeting his library. The ISB's archive was transported to the Netherlands during World War I, while a loyal employee preserved another part of Huysmans's archive in Brussels. During World War II, his archive was transferred for safekeeping, away from the Germans, to a medieval cellar of the Education Office. A faulty heating installation caused the cellars to flood, however, wreaking damage on the pre-war archive. Once the heating system was repaired, the paper became yellowed and dry, causing it to pulverise. To solve this desperate situation, the archive was transferred to the Antwerp city library, where it was hidden in a lift shaft until the end of the war. Initially, the ISB's archive was situated in a separate location, in the Maison du Peuple in Brussels, where the secretariat was located. It moved several times during the interwar period. The first move happened after World War I, when the BWP claimed the rooms in which the archive was kept. It was then transferred to another room in the Maison du Peuple, sustaining serious damage during the move. After the completion of the new Arbeidershogeschool university college in Uccle, the archive was stored here in an attic room, where it was exposed to wind and inclement weather conditions. In 1923, the head of school asked Huysmans to find another solution. At the time, Huysmans, who no longer served as secretary of the International, resisted pressure from the BWP and Victor Adler to send his archive to the new headquarters of the International in Zurich. While in office, he kept his archive at the Ministry for Arts and Sciences, where his secretary attempted to organise it. After his election as mayor of Antwerp, the archive was transferred to the city's town hall. By the end of Huysmans's life, his archive had grown exponentially, and the question of what to do with it after his death became increasingly pressing. He decided to donate it to the Archive and Museum for Flemish Cultural Life (AMVC, Archief en Museum voor het Vlaamse Cultuurleven) for conservation. He made consecutive archival donations in 1957, 1960, 1961 and 1964 respectively. After his death in 1968, his widow Ida Smissen further supplemented the archive at the AMVC, where it occupied an entire room. It was managed by a scientific committee that had been founded in 1974 within the Camille Huysmans Foundation (Camille Huysmans Stichting). That same year, the City of Antwerp also officially accepted the archive. In 1986, Huysmans's widow founded a new Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek

Camille Huysmans (SWOCH, Foundation Scientific Research Camille Huysmans). Soon after, it was tasked with the management of the archive, instead of the Camille Huysmans Stichting. The latter was liquidated in 2003, and the Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek Camille Huysmans designated as its legal successor. In 2009, the City of Antwerp loaned the archive to the Amsab-Institute for Social History for a period of twenty years, to make it accessible for the public. Even after this date, the Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek Camille Huysmans still found archival documents in the home of Huysmans's widow in Budingem. In 2015, this was added to the archive at Amsab-ISH, after Roger Rennenberg, the foundation's president, established a brief inventory. Finally, one envelope, which had already been handed over to Amsab-ISH for safekeeping, was also added to the archive.

Scope, content and (in) completeness of the archive

Huysmans was in his nineties when he died. During his lifetime, he held several positions and offices. In his personal life, his interests covered a wide range of very diverse subjects. His archive thus contains an incredible array of sources about anything and everything. Not much archival material was preserved predating World War II. His general correspondence was only systematically kept from 1949 onwards. The lion's share of documents from Huysmans's tenure as mayor in Antwerp relate to the post-war period. Almost no archival material was preserved from his first presidency of the Chamber of Representatives (1936-1939), whereas the archive of his second presidency (1954-1958) is almost complete. It is very difficult to determine which documents are missing from the archive. We can, however, provide some specific examples of gaps in the archive. In some cases, Huysmans contributed to this, donating letters that he had received from Lenin in his capacity as secretary of the ISB to the Moscow-based Institute for Marxism-Leninism. In other cases, archival documents were loaned and never returned. A good example is the collection of the First International, which was compiled by the ISB. Around 1910, this collection was loaned to the Viennese socialist historian, Riasanoff, who only returned part of this archive. After Huysmans's death, a lot of archival material disappeared. This is largely the fault of researchers who never returned loans. The archival material of and about the socialist party in Australia and New Zealand for the period between 1903 and 1915 mainly consists of copies. It is unclear where the originals are. We also have no idea how many archival documents were loaned without copies being made before the loan. Finally, time also plays a role. Part of these archival documents were heavily damaged, by moisture and pulverisation of the paper. This possibly also explains why some of the material was lost.

Selection

Amsab-ISH received the loan, on condition that nothing would be removed from the archive or destroyed without the formal agreement of the City of Antwerp and the Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek Camille Huysmans.

A number of items were not included in the inventory, however. This largely consists of material that Huysmans was sent while in office and includes minutes of the city council of Antwerp, the Belgian Official Gazette, circulars of the Ministry of Education... It makes no sense to keep these in Huysmans's archive. These documents can be found in the Antwerp city archives and in the National Archives. A complete set of all the Proceedings of the Chamber of Representatives listing Huysmans was compiled by Wim Geldolf and can be found in the archive of the Stichting Camille Huysmans. Huysmans also had extensive documentation about all the services of the City of Antwerp, such as the police, the fire department, the public social welfare centre (OCMW), the port authority... This documentation can also be found in the Antwerp city archives and was not retained.

Separate material

Huysmans's library and any books, brochures and periodicals that were found among the archival documents were handed over to the Amsab-ISH library. Posters, photos, iconographic material, and furniture were also separated from the archival documents. The archive also contained a lot of material that is not in any way related to the archive and did not belong to Huysmans. The general correspondence contains letters addressed to his wife and children. Some of these were categorised during his lifetime, especially the letters to his wife. This material was retained as such. In addition to this, the archive contained bundles and documents relating to family, friends and organisations, which somehow ended up in his archive but were not part of it. This archival material, amounting to forty boxes in all, was separated from the archive to the extent possible. This concerns archival material relating to Martha Espagne, Ida Smissen, Marthe Huysmans, Paul Huysmans, Sara Huysmans, César De Paepe, Willem Eekelers, August De Bruyne, Edgard Van de Castele, Antoinette Kleinhaus, Prosper Verbaere, Antony Neuckens, Leo Delwaide and the Brussels Deutscher Arbeiter-Verein. The description of the archival material of Huysmans's family members were added at the end of the inventory. The remaining archival material was separated. Archival material pertaining to Emile Vandervelde was also found. However, it proved almost impossible to separate from the Huysmans archive, which is why it was retained.

System of arrangement

Making Camille Huysmans's archive accessible to the public and for research was not an easy job. There are two primary reasons for this, starting with Huysmans himself. His age, the many and very diverse activities in which he engaged during his lifetime, combined with his passion to collect simply everything, means this archive is quite simply voluminous. His legendary scribble did not help matters either, making it very difficult to identify handwritten documents. A second, more important reason is the large number of attempts after his death to make the archive accessible. Initially, his widow, Ida Smissen, and her assistant, Simonne de Vos, attempted to organise the archive, using a cartographic library. Afterwards, an entire team at the AMVC worked on facilitating access to this archive. They used a file system, tables with descriptions of every item and a complicated code system. They also established an index with names and keywords. Unfortunately, they did not stick to archival rules, choosing instead to make the archive accessible based on a documentary approach. Items that were considered 'interesting' were removed from the existing classification, letters and annexes were separated and described as separate documents... resulting in considerable chaos. The compiled index is far from complete, giving a distorted view of the archive's contents. The index is therefore misleading for researchers and must be used with caution. The fact that a concordance table was added to this inventory, with references to the information retrieval system used by the SWOCH, is first and foremost intended to facilitate the control of expired codes of references in old publications. During the subsequent attempt to make the archive accessible, after it was handed over to Amsab-ISH, the archivists opted to subdivide the archive in time periods: before World War I, World War I, interwar period, World War II, after World War II. The resulting overview contained more than 6,600 descriptions, which only complicated matters even more. Restoring the original order of the archive thus proved an almost impossible and hellish endeavour. After a lot of puzzling and detective work, a more or less satisfactory, albeit inconclusive, result was achieved. The archive now consists of nine clearly defined sub-fonds, with a residual fraction of separate documents and files. It was decided to follow the classic categorisation of private archives for the classification scheme: General, Private Life and Public Life. In Huysmans's case, his Public Life was subdivided as follows: the party, followed by his political career, his various board positions and finally the archive of the Socialist International. In addition to this, although conflicting to some extent with the logic behind this classification, it was decided to add two subdivisions for his archives during World War I and World War II, which were formed while he was residing in the Netherlands and London, respectively. This does not mean, however, that the archive consists of a linear set of data. Huysmans did not keep separate archives for the party, for his political functions and/or his work for the international socialist movement. Huysmans usually resorted to classification systems typical for the specific office he was holding, based on certain aspects which he found important. For example the Port of Antwerp, education, the diamond industry, Jewish interests, as well as the Belgian Socialist Party, the Socialist International... Huysmans never kept a separate archive for his activities in the BWP/BSP, nor did he keep an archive relating to his activities in the international socialist movement, except for the archive that was created during his tenure as secretary of the ISB. The separate subdivisions in the inventory, that relate to his work for the socialist movement, therefore mainly contain residual material from his archive and documents that were removed from the original classification during previous attempts to organise his archive. The same applies to his tenure as alderman (to a lesser extent in Brussels, but mainly in Antwerp), a period for which he never kept a separate archive.

The nine sub-fonds that were identified cannot be used to organise the inventory as a whole. They are embedded in a wider framework, ensuring that archival material that does not belong to one of these sub-fonds can also be classified in a logically organised fonds.

The nine sub-fonds contain the following:

- The general correspondence that Huymans received at home. This also contains letters to his wife, who archived everything for him as he got older. Huysmans also had the habit to add all kinds of non-personal documents and manuscripts to these folders. The descriptor 'correspondence' should therefore not be taken literally. There is also a gap in this series, for the period from April 1954 until November 1958, which happens to be the period in which he was President of the Chamber of Representatives.

- The archive of his activities as Alderman for Education also contains all the documents from this same period which relate to his work in the Chamber of Representatives. A separate subdivision was added for these documents in the inventory. Essentially this set of documents comprises a number of separate documents and files, as well as the documents that document his activities during his last period as an MP who was elected to the chamber. The archive material for the period from 1921 until 1925 was therefore classified separately, with his archive during his tenure as alderman.

- The following sub-fonds refers to his tenure as mayor. It also contains a small amount of archival materials (mainly about the Spanish civil war) that attests to his activities as President of the Chamber of Representatives from 1936 until 1939, of which no separate archive has been preserved.

- As we already stated above, not much has been preserved in relation to his activities as President of the Chamber of Representatives during the interwar period. The archive of his second presidency is relatively intact and constitutes the fourth sub-fonds.

- There are three other sub-fonds that withstood the test of time without too much damage: two relating to Huysmans's tenure as Education Minister in 1925-1927 and 1947-1949, and one of his tenure as Prime Minister.

- In addition to this, there is also Huysmans's archive as secretary of the ISB. As far as completeness is concerned, it is worth mentioning that this sub-fonds does not just contain his own archive but also that of his predecessor, the ISB's first secretary Victor Serwy. The sub-fonds also contains the archive of Gerrit Mannoury of the Interparliamentary Committee, increasing its completeness. Wim Geldolf made an interesting remark in this respect. According to him, the ISB's archive was 'edited' after World War I. He is unable to say at whose request and had no other specifications to add.

- Finally, part of the archive was constituted during the two World Wars, when Huysmans resided in the Netherlands and in London respectively. During World War I, he resided in the Netherlands in his capacity as secretary of the ISB, although he did keep in touch with friends and acquaintances in Belgium. His mail was sent to the ISB headquarters. To avoid making this inventory unnecessarily complex, this material was stored in a separate sub-fonds, titled 'World War I', to separate them from the ISB sub-fonds. The sub-fonds relating to his stay in London during World War II is more clearly defined. It mainly contains documents pertaining to his presidency of the Belgium Parliamentary Office (BPO) but also to his presidency of the Socialist International during this period. This sub-fonds also contains the archive of the BPO's secretary, Armand Dutry.

Related archives

Huysmans's documents can also be found in other national and international archival repositories. During his lifetime, he also donated part of his library to the Antwerp-based Hendrik Conscience Heritage Library for conservation purposes.

The Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek Camille Huysmans also kept two ring binders with documents pertaining to the Stichting Camille Huysmans. These were found among the material recovered from the home of his widow, Ida Smissen, in Budingen and were added to the existing archive of the Stichting Camille Huysmans. There are several other archives of organisations in which Huysmans played an important role. The archives pertaining to the Belgian Socialist Party are preserved at Amsab-ISH, along with the archives of a number of socialist organisations or newspapers in which Huysmans played a role, such as the Volksgazet.

There are plenty of sources available about his interventions on the city councils of Brussels and Antwerp in the archival repositories of the cities of Brussels and Antwerp, respectively. The official archives relating to the many political mandates that he held during his lifetime are preserved in city and national archival repositories. Finally, Huysmans also held various positions in a wide range of organisations, whose archives are preserved elsewhere, such as the Université Libre de Bruxelles.

Conditions of access

The archives are freely accessible.

In addition to providing access for scientific research, the mission of the Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek Camille Huysmans is also to make the archives accessible to everyone by digitising it. The digitisation project, financed by the Stichting was finalised in the course of 2020. All digitised documents are made available online at www.amsab.be

10. Concordance table

The files from the Camille Huysmans' archive were given a reference number in the past. Since then, a number of monographs and articles have been published in which these old reference numbers were included. Therefore, it is useful to include a concordance list in the inventory. It enables us to match references from previous publications with the current classification system. In fact, there are two concordance lists. The former matches up the old reference numbers with the new reference numbers. Vice versa, for the latter, i.e. a list of the new reference numbers and their match with the old reference numbers.

However, it was impossible to make a perfect match between old and new reference numbers, as new files have been added to the inventory. The latter have not been included in the concordance list, since the old reference numbers were evidently lacking. Also, a perfect match was impossible because old numbers could not be traced or were incorrectly registered. These old reference numbers are not included in the concordance list (although they do exist). As a consequence, it is possible that some references in publications cannot be traced back to the new reference numbers (since there is no concordance).

When old reference numbers are indeed included in the concordance list, a number of possibilities exist:

- There is a one-to-one relationship between old and new reference numbers, in the first concordance list and in the second list.
- Sometimes, old reference numbers are split up, resulting in two or more new reference numbers. The first concordance list thus contains 2 or more (new) reference numbers alongside the old reference number. The second concordance list contains the old reference number alongside several new reference numbers.
- Sometimes, (parts of) old reference numbers are 'merged' into one new reference number. In that case, a new reference number appears several times in the first list, as it matches with several old reference numbers. Consequently, the second list will contain two or more old reference numbers, matching with one new reference number.

The Stichting Wetenschappelijk Onderzoek Camille Huysmans [Foundation Scientific Research Camille Huysmans] (SWOCH)

is a foundation under Belgian law, established in 1986 by the widow of Huysmans, Mrs Ida Smissen (1922-2001), its aim is to preserve the archive of Camille Huysmans in its entirety for scientific research.

The activities to reach this goal are:

- stimulating scientific research regarding the Camille Huysmans archive in general and more particularly focusing on the publication of documents related to him
- making accessible correspondence and manuscripts; drawing up an archive inventory
- making national and international contacts to achieve the foundation's objectives.

More information on the Foundation, its publications and activities can be found on the website www.camillehuysmans.be

Amsab-ISH

Amsab-Institute of Social History tells the story of ordinary people caught up in conflict, fighting injustice and discrimination, trying to protect the environment, claiming their rights and striving for equality. We preserve, access and promote these stories. Our collections contain letters, posters, pictures, films, books, and many more records created by organizations as well as individuals. You can access them online or in our reading room, which was recently renovated. We publish books and the periodical Brood & Rozen. And we set up projects aimed at the wider public, in cooperation with other partners, both in Belgium and abroad. Also, the latter are instrumental in boosting research efforts.
